Mr. C. T. Lally tendered his resignation, in writing, as Commanding Officer of the Wainwright Volunteer Constabulary, and, on motion by Councillor Billing, his resignation was accepted with regret and the Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to convey to Mr. Lally the thanks and appreciation of council for his service in this connection.

Mr. L. J. Killoran, Secretary-Treasurer of the Wainwright Roman Catholic Separate School District No. 31, on behalf of the Board of Trustees, requested that the same rate be levied for school purposes for the Separate School District as that levied for Public School purposes and agreeing to accept the money raised by such levy in payment as their requisition for the year, 1941, and, on motion by Councillor Huntingford, the communication was received and filed pending the compiling of estimates for the current year.

Alberta Farmers Get Ten Million Bonus

Alberta farmers will receive about $10,000,000 of the $35,000,000 total allocated for summerallow bonus payments by the federal government, it was announced by E. L. Gray, M.P. for Calgary, in a speech in the Legislature and leader of the provincial Liberal organization, Mr. Gray has now been appointed head of the bonus scheme here. Bonus will vary from $2 an acre for former wheat lands devoted to coarse grains to $6 an acre for summerallow, fall crops or grass, he said. It is possible, he added, that special information meetings will be held at rural points to explain the scheme's provisions. Alberta agriculture officials also state that this is possible having received request to this effect from Agricultural Minister J. Gardiner.

North of Province Is Needing Moisture

The precipitation which has occurred from April 1st to May 6th, inclusive, combined with that which fell last August during the months of August, September and October last (which fall precipitation is all available for this present crop) and weighted for wheat acreage, indicates that the moisture condition for the three prairie provinces, as a unit, on stubble land which was seeded to wheat, is now 85 per cent of normal, and on land that was summerfallowed and seeded to wheat 88 per cent of normal, or a round figure for the whole acreage of approximately 87 per cent, as compared with 87 at August, and 74 per cent a year ago. (Wheat apparently was sown on about 60 per cent summerfallow and 40 per cent stubble, according to preliminary estimates.)

The northern and central parts of Alberta and the west central part of Saskatchewan are, so far, badly deficient of moisture, but the whole of Manitoba and the greater part of Saskatchewan enjoys an excellent moisture condition.

We understand that Vic. Devignon has received word to report to the military authorities for duty. Charlie will be in answer to his call last week. He will fill the position of radio technician.

Local Business Man Bereaved

Another familiar face has passed from our midst in the death on Sunday last of Mr. Wm. J. (Bill) Mitchell, who some three years ago purchased the soft water business from E. S. Squires.

Mr. Mitchell was 70 years of age on February 10th, and was taken sick only three weeks ago. He was taken to Vermilion to be with other relatives there, when he was ordered to hospital to undergo an immediate operation for internal trouble.

Preparations were made for such, but it was found that the patient was beyond medical assistance, and after only a few days in the hospital he passed away as stated.

He was born in Centralia, Ontario, and came west in 1897, locating first in Alameda, Saskatchewan, and later (1911) to Vegreville, Alta., where for many years he was manager of the Hayward Lumber Co. at that point. Later (1926) he was shifted to manage the same company's yard at Lavooy, Alta. Eventually he closed his connections with that business and he and Mrs. Mitchell moved to Vancouver, B.C.

In March, 1938, they returned to the prairies and located in town; living here since that time. His son, Lorne, has been a resident here for very many years as a partner in the business of the Standard Pharmacy.

The late Mr. Mitchell was married to his first wife, Miss Mabel Thompson in 1897 before coming west, and from that union there were born six sons, Mervin, Fred, Lorne, Ivan, John and William, and one daughter (Mrs. W. R. Jory of Vermilion). The oldest son died in childhood. These children lost their mother in 1912 at Vegreville, and about 20 years ago, the deceased married Miss Agnes McIntyre, at Elkcity, Alta. In later years he suffered the sad affliction of deafness, a trial he bore without complaint.

For very many years he has been a member of the L.O.O.F., and followed strictly the tenets of that Order in his every-day life. Though somewhat quiet and unassuming, he held the respect and esteem of a very large circle of friends, and was always ready with the helping hand. His passing removes another of nature's gentlemen, and sympathies are expressed to the sorrowing relatives.

The funeral is being held today (Wed.) at Vegreville, where a family cemetery plot is located. The Odd Fellows' lodge there will officiate at the graveside.

The members of the local War Service League are asked to be present at a special meeting of the body on Friday afternoon next in the Town Hall at 3 p.m. New members are urgently needed as the "boys over there" are sadly in need of our parcels. Everyone interested is invited to join in this work.

Good Comedy-Drama This Week-End Show

The teaming of Fred MacMurray and Barbara Stanwyck is well worked out in the Paramount comedy-drama "Remember the Night" showing at the Elitte theatre this week-end.

This feature film ties up a jewelry robbery with Yuletide festivity, love entanglements and sheer sentimentality to such an extent that the interest is held right up to the finish of the picture which eventuates in the producer showing where a crown prince was willing to wait until the end of a ball season, served by a girl who he sent up in the course of his duties to the state before she consented to become his bride.

The scene is set down in Indiana, and the story is truly dramatic. Don't miss it for a thrill. Last half of this week.

United Church Ladies In Monthly Session

The members of the W.M.S. and the W.A. of the United Church met last week at the home of Mrs. F. Fish, when some 15 ladies were present.

In the meeting of the W.M.S. held first, Mrs. Knowles conducted the devotional, and Mrs. D. Currie took the study book period.

Following this, President Mrs. Knowles presided for the W.A. meeting when plans were made for a home cooking sale to be held near "Father's Day", and which will be advertised in The Star.

Meadames Richard and Telford were hostesses for the delicious lunch which followed the close of the business meeting.

After reading the foregoing and listening to our radio news reels those days can anyone doubt the call of your local branch of the Red Cross asking for sewers and helpers means "you."

We do thank those who have come forward in response to one appeal, but more help is needed to finish our quota of work.

A parcel containing three pairs of socks and one pair of mitts was left in the Red Cross rooms without a name. Will the knitter of these articles please let us have her name for our records.

We are grateful to the Patriotic Service Club for their generous donation of $20.00.

PERSPECTIVE ON GREECE

by EDGAR McINNIS

(as broadcast over the National Network of the CBC on Sunday, April 20th, 1941.)

I think it's desirable, if we're to have a balanced understanding of the significance of this tremendous week, to look back beyond it to the events of the past few months. That isn't because I want to minimize present defeats by dwelling on past victories. We've got beyond the stage where any efforts at false complacency are either useful or desirable. But we'll get a better perspective if we keep in mind the essential long-range factors and their bearing, not only on the present situation in the Mediterranean, but on the war as a whole.

Let us remember first of all that we have been warned of difficulties ahead. All our responsible leaders have been hammering away at the fact that 1941 is going to be a hard and dangerous year. Our supreme task during the months ahead is to come through without a decisive defeat. None of us doubts that we will come through. But that for the moment is our single objective; and if we can attain that, no matter what minor set-backs we may suffer, we will have done everything that even the most optimistic of us can expect.

But we have learned from past experience that to do this—to gain the time which at present is our urgent necessity—we have to do more than wait passively for attacks. One way to cut down the enemy's power to hurt us is to seize every opportunity to hurt him. In the process of gaining time, we must constantly play for position. We are still inferior in resources. But just because our resources are inferior, we must use them to the utmost. We must take the greatest possible toll from the enemy when he attacks. But we must also use every opportunity to get in our own blows whenever he gives us an opening.

Now that is largely the story of the past three months. Those were months during which the pressure was somewhat eased. We weren't forced to keep all our forces engaged in beating off the Nazi attacks. We had some margin to spare, even though a small one. I think it can be said that we made full use of that margin. It was too small to hope that it could be used to deal a decisive blow. But it was used to strike, and to strike hard; and the damage that was done was clear gain which would have had effect in weakening the enemy's blows when he got ready to strike.

It's worth remembering, however, that all through this period we were really on the defensive, and that our activities were limited by certain paramount defensive needs. The first and overwhelming task of Britain was to guard against invasion. It is in the British Isles and in the waters around them that the final decision must be reached. That is the only place that Hitler can win. No matter what happens elsewhere, that is where Britain must prevent him from winning. And so long as Hitler has a million men massed for invasion, and another million available as reserves, Britain must keep at home a force strong enough to meet that threat. Whatever happens in Greece and Libya, at Suez or Singapore, its importance must be directly measured by its effect on the Battle of Britain; and until Britain herself is secure, it is only from the point of view of their effect on her own security that she can contemplate operations elsewhere.

From that point of view, Suez and the Eastern Mediterranean come second in importance only to Britain herself. The reason is no longer the importance of Suez as a commercial link with the east. It has ceased to be one of Britain's supply routes. In fact, the movement of supplies is now the other way, from Britain to Suez. But the British position there is the key to the whole Middle East. Alexandria and Suez give her naval command of the eastern Mediterranean, and on that indispensable foundation rests her military and political influence in that vital area between Egypt and India. While she retains that influence, she can get the oil of Iran and Iraq. Even more important, she can keep the Nazis from getting it. She can look on her possession in Asia and Africa as comparatively secure. She can keep the field of conflict within comparatively practical dimensions. Even so, it is a wide enough; but a defensive line running from Tripoli to the Dardanelles is certainly preferable to one running from Cape Town to Bombay.

We must count it our good fortune that it's only now that the Axis is making a concerted drive against this position. The reason, of course, is that Germany counted on a slower but in the end a surer and less expensive method. Her calculations have been somewhat upset already, and we have good hope that the future will prove them even more unfounded. Certainly we are in a far better position to parry the stroke now than we would have been if it had come six months ago.

Because even if Libya is again overrun, we still retain a balance of profit from Wavell's victories. Those victories had two important results at the time. The first one was to remove, even though temporarily, an imminent threat to Egypt. The second was to shatter the army and organization which Graziani had built up through months of effort. If that second result hadn't been attained—if Graziani had adopted tactics of mobility and flexibility instead of shutting up garrisons whose loss destroyed his army placements—the significance of the advance would not have been nearly so great. As it was, the threat could not be renewed until a new force had been collected, and that precarious interval gave Britain a chance to embark on other efforts which might have otherwise been impossible.

In other words, the victory in Libya made possible the conquest of East Africa; and that conquest will stand unless we are driven completely out of Egypt. It means a removal of a danger from our rear; but recent events have given it a still greater importance. The decision of President Roosevelt to remove the Red Sea from the list of combat zones has changed the whole supply picture in the Middle East. His statement this week that American ships will be protected outside the combat zones adds tremendous significance to that step. If it means what it appears to mean, American ships can count on American convoys right up to Suez.

Now that of course is an added incentive for the Axis to conquer Egypt, which is the only way for them to recover East Africa. The threat is a real one, particularly with the Germans in charge. They are likely to avoid Graziani's reliance on fixed positions and to adopt more mobile tactics which will be harder to meet. But once their advance is checked, as it seems to have been, the drive will be harder to maintain. The navy has gone in to cut the sea route from Sicily. Advance supply bases are still scarce and the land lines are vulnerable. Germany's ability to get up supplies has been one of the marvels of this war; but in Libya, now that the Nazis have been balked of a quick decision, the balance seems definitely unfavorable to their success.

In any case, here is a threat which Britain must do everything possible to meet. The whole situation in the Middle East is extremely grave. With Turkey uncertain and Russia ambiguous, the Nazi infiltration into Syria and Iraq is a definite menace. If Britain were driven from Egypt, these positions might fall without a blow. Their loss would not in itself be fatal, but it would be a real disadvantage to us, and a real gain to the Germans. Here as elsewhere our task is to hang on until autumn when our increased resources will make our whole position more secure.

These, then, are the hard facts which have so severely conditioned our aid to Greece. Compared to the defence of Britain and the retention of Suez, Greece is well back in third place. Its possession would be a real but minor advantage; its loss would be in no way comparable to the loss of Egypt. But it did offer us a chance, by taking risks, to put the enemy at a disadvantage, and whatever the outcome, I believe the risks to have been justified.

It has been said that the decision to send troops to Greece was a political and not a military decision. In one sense that is true. The generals

WHAT ADVERTISING REALLY IS

—WHAT IT HAS DONE
—WHAT IT CAN DO NOW

- Advertising makes possible better merchandise at lower prices, thus serving the consumer and through service to the consumer creating greater demands for advertised products.
- Advertising attracts to the advertiser the better type of employee.
- Advertising, because it helps a manufacturer attract a better type of dealer and jobber, contributes to better collections and smaller credit losses.
- Advertising helps the manufacturer get quicker distribution, more economically and more rapidly because it builds greater and more immediate product acceptance by jobbers, dealers and consumers.
- Advertising is the quickest and most economical aid in the introduction of new products added to an established line and in the introduction of improved products.
- With Advertising the manufacturer can be sure of almost immediate acceptance by consumers of a new or improved product.
- Advertising creates greater stability of production and employment by helping level peaks and valleys, of seasonal demand.
- Advertising, in highly competitive industries, by creating greater consumer interest in a type of product, often creates more business for all manufacturers in the field.
- Advertising is a most potent force in building better public relations.
- Advertising, by building consumer recognition of a trade-mark or trade name often enables the manufacturer of a product that has become obsolescent to build sales on another type of product which meets current consumer needs.
- Advertising assures manufacturers better supplies of raw materials at good prices because advertisers are likely to offer a greater stability of demand.
- Advertising helps assure the advertiser of getting the first opportunity to accept or reject patents, suggestions and other ideas for improvements in product or policy.

Advertising contributes to better and more efficient sales management by attracting the best type of salesman, by giving the salesman a better proposition to sell, by helping the salesman conserve his time, because it has created wider and more intensive distribution, and by opening the buyers' doors that might otherwise be closed.

GARDEN SERVICE

Nature does not appreciate man-made, straight, unbroken dividing lines such as backyard fences, abrupt corners on houses or garages or narrow, straight side-walks.

All of these unduly emphasize the confining limits of small city lots. The latter, however, can be made to appear many times more spacious if the fences and walls are partially covered with vines, if corners are screened with shrubbery, leading down to tall annual flowers.

Intriguing Walks

A curve in the walk or driveway will make it actually intriguing and will not add more than a few seconds to navigating time between front door and the roadway. If we put in these curves, however, landscape experts tell us, we must be sure to make a reason for them, otherwise the whole effect will be artificial. At the bend in the driveway or path, therefore, it is well to have a tree or a group of shrubs or a flower bed.

In screening, it is not necessary nor desirable to cover the whole of fence, wall or garage, unless the same is unsightly. Much more pleasing results follow where the shrubbery vines and flowers merely break the lines of the man-made structures behind them, but leave enough showing for contrast.

For this work the gardener usually employs perennial plants, permanent shrubbery and hardy creepers. One can, however, get very fair results with quick-growing annuals in both the bushy or vine-growing types.

Vegetable Groups

Vegetables divide themselves into three main planting groups. The first will stand some frost. In this class will be the garden peas, carrots, beets, lettuce, radish, spinach and other hardy types listed for Canadian planting in the Canadian seed catalogues. In many parts of the Dominion planting of these will now be underway or planned.

The second group is not frost hardy and is best not planted until danger of cold weather is practically over. This group includes beans, cabbage, potatoes and corn.

Finally there are the really tender things that originally hailed from Mexico and other Southern points. These include the melon family—melons, cucumbers, pumpkins and squash, pepper plants, celery plants and tomato plants are also in the 'tender' category. There is nothing to be gained in planting these before weather and soil have really turned warm.

Because one is advised not to plant certain types of vegetables before a certain time, this does not mean that all the seed should be sown at once. Indeed with vegetables that are sown in the green stage it is well to spread sowings over several weeks so that the season of harvest will be lengthened accordingly.

NEXT WEEK—Still plenty of time. Importance of Cultivation.

Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

The yield of wheat is governed mainly by rainfall, which helps to make plant food available to the growing crop.

Summerfallow, when it is done well, conserves rainfall and so makes more moisture hence more plant food available. Summerfallow, therefore, increases the yield per acre.

It can be said, then, that summerfallow is actually a method of storing wheat in the soil instead of storing it in the bin.

The increase of wheat yield on summerfallow depends upon the amount of rainfall that the summerfallow has conserved, and this depends upon how well the summerfallow is kept free from weeds (because weeds steal the stored up moisture from the wheat plant) and depends also upon how early in the season the summerfallow is done.

There will be more summerfallow done this year than ever before in the history of Western Canada. It is essential, therefore, that summerfallow should be done early—in May if possible—in order to conserve the late May and early June rains; it is also necessary that summerfallow shall be kept as free from weeds as possible, without disturbing the soil any more than is necessary, because when the soil is disturbed precious moisture is evaporated into the air.

Following factors have tended to raise price: Prospects of Japanese and Manchurian wheat crops below normal—It is reported that Spain has purchased an additional 14 million bushels of Argentine wheat—(payment to be spread over 5 years)—Spring seeding operations two to three weeks behind in the Balkans and northern and western Europe.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Germany has occupied Yugoslavia and Greece—Bromhall estimates surplus wheat supplies of Canada, Australia and Argentina on April 1st were 40 per cent higher than last year—Soil conditions excellent in the Argentine and acreage unchanged from last year.

GROWING TOLL OF BRITAIN'S CHURCHES

While Bible Sales Go Leaping Up...

Official figures of the damage done by Nazi bombers to Church property in England and Wales comes on the heels of the affirmation of the Hitler creed in a home broadcast to German youth.

"This," the announcer declared, "is the Creed of our time. We believe in Hitler. And what of the old Creeds? The Scriptures are dead. We need no fairy-tales today. Believing, we entrust our destiny to our Führer."

As a practical contribution to the Nazi point of view, their bombers have now destroyed or damaged 2,659 churches of all denominations in England and Wales, apart from vicarages, convents, church halls and mansees. Among the 714 which have been completely destroyed or seriously damaged are the cathedrals of Coventry, Llandaff and St. Paul's (although the main fabric of the latter remains untouched). Westminster Abbey, Westminster Cathedral, and the Deanery of Canterbury have all scars to show the meaning of "kultur." No fewer than 108 vicarages, 304 church halls, 236 church schools, and 36 convents have all been wrecked.

The fact that this Nazi attitude to Christianity is not shared by all who live within the Reich may be inferred from much bigger attendances reported at Catholic and Protestant Churches and the increasing sale of the Bible to Germans, other than Nazis. It has gone up from 530,000 in 1930 to 1,525,000 last year.

Continuation Of Perspective on Greece

were doubtful whether Greece could be defended, and felt that there were other and more favorable fields of operation. None the less, the political question has serious military implications. It was not only a chance to force the Germans to undertake a serious campaign instead of a bloodless occupation. There was also a chance that other countries such as Yugoslavia and Turkey might be encouraged to fight instead of surrendering. That was a chance which could not be neglected; and even if the results weren't all that could be hoped, it was better to try than let the Balkans go by default, and perhaps to lose Turkey, and Iraq into the bargain.

And in fact the effort has brought certain real gains. It has not been unimportant to upset Hitler's calculations, even to a limited extent. He has been forced to make a serious military effort which will delay the possibility of a major stroke against Britain or Suez. He has had to engage in a full-sized campaign in a theatre where he has had no chance of forcing a final decision. Whatever losses we have incurred, we have inflicted far more serious ones. If the skill and equipment of the Yugoslavs were not equal to their valor, the efforts of the British and Greek troops have been beyond praise. Their line has held in the face of tremendously superior forces. Their successive retreats have been carried out under difficult circumstances with coolness and tenacity. The German troops in this battle will have a new idea of what to expect if they ever try to go to England.

Now, it is true, as Churchill reminded us after Dunkirk, that wars are not won by retreats. But a situation which ends in retreat may be a real contribution to ultimate victory. And that is particularly true when the essential problem is to prevent the enemy from getting into a position to deliver a knockout blow. In this case he has been engaged on ground that was not of his own choosing, and forced to expend his strength on efforts whose results can have only a secondary importance. The oftener such efforts can be repeated, and the longer they can be protracted, the more time we have to bring into play the resources which will not only avert defeat, but give us the ultimate victory.

They say that big men can whip little men. Like all rules this has its exceptions. A good little man can go in and cut his opponent down to his own size. He must avoid being knocked out; but short of that he must go in as often and as hard as he can. Those are the tactics which are now imposed on Britain. An American correspondent, writing last week from London, put it this way:

"Militarily speaking, the British can substitute courage, brains and superior imaginative tactics for the crushing weight of the Germans and their organization. They can thus hang on until that day—in the not too distant future, they hope—when they will be powerful enough to carry the attack to the Germans."

There is no reason why Greece should diminish that hope. We need not pretend to enjoy the result—particularly since it leaves that Mediterraneananean Palastar, Mussolini, boasting over unearned victories. But under the obvious outcome there may well be effects of this campaign which will have a real bearing on ultimate victory.

CANADA CALLS

Canada has reason to count her blessings in these days of trial.

Canada is three thousand miles away from the sound of guns which are devastating Europe.

The broad Atlantic Ocean rolls between us and the ruthless savagery of the German Armies.

The strongest fleets in the world—British, American and Canadian—patrol the sea between us and the enemy.

We have a great friendly nation, probably the richest and most powerful in the world, at our side.

CANADA CAN AFFORD HER SACRIFICES

This war is a mechanized war.

We have the nickel... copper... lead... zinc and other metals the war industries need. We have access to the iron. We can make the steel.

We have the organized industries to fabricate these metals and make the trucks, and tanks, and guns, and planes, and the ships.

We have skilled workers and the plants for mass production. Canada has the wheat and the food supplies.

Let us count our blessings, and tighten our belts.

Canada is rich—one of the richest countries per head of population in the world. Let us lend our strength to the utmost of our power. Our national future depends upon Victory.

We must win to live.

THERE WILL BE FURTHER CALLS

There have been many calls upon the people of this country for money since Canada entered the war at the side of Great Britain.

There will be further calls.

Let us face the future unafraid.

Canada can carry the load.

But every Canadian must shoulder his and her share.

This is the most critical hour in our history. Let the future historians say of Canada, as they will say of our Mother Country: "This was their finest hour."

Editorial No. 8

THE PRESS AND PROPAGANDA

One of the ever present dangers in the publishing field is the possibility of becoming a propaganda agency for some group or cause. Editors guard carefully against this possibility, and their efforts to be fair sometimes incur the displeasure of those whose propaganda they refuse to propagate. Of course there are two kinds of propaganda—good and bad.
The word propaganda has been much abused in the past few years and to the man in the street propaganda
now seems to mean exclusively that type of news sent out by the enemy to confuse and confound those who read it.

Propaganda is actually the method adopted for the propagation of doctrines and principles, either religious or secular. If there is such a thing as good propaganda the question nar-rately arises, why does the newspaper not become a propaganda agency for all propaganda that is good? As a matter of fact the newspaper does become such an agency in a broad sense, but not in the way that some propagandists would have it.
For instance, any religious sect
might consider its propaganda good,
and therefore entitled to space in the newspaper. An important factor is overlooked however, in this reasoning. Propaganda espoused and supported by a newspaper must be of a type generally beneficial to the community as a whole. It would not be fair or ethical to use the propaganda of one church, where there are perhaps half a dozen churches in the same community.

Then too, there is often confusion in the minds of many people as to what is news and what is propaganda.

actual event which took place in a church or a lodge, or a service club would be news. On the other hand an item which sought to impress the reader with the principles or the doctrine of the organization would be propaganda. In short propaganda is that type of newsmatter which seeks to proselytize or convert the reader to one particular code of ethics, principles or doctrine.

The position of the newspaper is clear on this point. The newspaper is representative of the whole community, and while its editor or publisher might be an Anglican, Baptist, Presbyterian, United Churchman, or Roman Catholic, it would not be fair doctrines of the sect to which he personally belongs. News is another matter. If more news comes from the United Church because it has more organizations, or because its press secretaries are more wide awake than naturally that church would receive more space in the paper than the Anglican or Baptist if those churches were not so well organized or did not possess good press secretaries.

Weekly newspapers depend to a very large extent upon correspondents and press secretaries for news items, and this being the case it is timely to remind correspondents and secretaries that the newspaper is interested primarily in the news, and not in acting as an agency for the dissemination of their principles.
This reason, however, does not preclude the newspaper drawing attention to any special effort made by any organization or institution within the community.

To sum up the attitude of the press toward propaganda it should be clearly understood that the press is interested in the events concerning organizations, rather than the ethics or principles which attract one to membership in these groups.

CONSCRIPTION COMIN SOON?

There are signs that conscription
of manpower may not be far away.
This would be conscription for fighting overseas in any part of the world where British interests must be protected, says the High River Times.

A stage seems to come in the progress of wars, when voluntary enlistment is inadequate in the opinion of many people, to meet requirements.
In an effort to secure required enlistment, measures may be taken which in their methods are anything but voluntary. At present a number of organizations are pressing for compulsory enlistment, according to age classification, as a fairer system.

In some respects there is a mechanical impersonality about a conscription plan which appeals to those who are eligible, no less than to those who are quite unlikely ever to be called on to take any risk. The matter of decision is taken out of the hands of many a young man who does not see his way clearly as to what he should do, or where he is most needed.

The war developments of the past few weeks have pressed home the needs of Britain and the strength required in manpower and machines, to combat the apparently inexhaustible armies of the enemy. But one thing continues of paramount importance.
There must be no lack of mechanized equipment to outfit the men who are sent into action. If men's lives are to be risked, there must be no slacking nor striking in factories on questions of profits or service or hours.
When a man offers his life or when his life is conscripted, no higher service can be given. The scale of pay of the common soldier in comparison with other industry or with administration, still continues, and is likely to continue, as the biggest argument against excess profits, or high salaries
at home.

There is no equality of service in war, but there can be some equalization of income. Taxes are taking a heavy toll of incomes of Canada's wealthy class, but the man with a personal income of $20,000 who is still permitted to retain $13,000 does not lend the heartstrings.

The present government at Ottawa has been pledged not to impose conscription for overseas service.

Quebec is certainly a matter of consideration in this pledge, and there was well founded apprehension that conscription in all its implications
would destroy the unity of Canada.
To national leaders falls the task of convincing dissenters that collapse of Britain means collapse of world trade by which Canada has lived and been maintained. In every sense maximum aid is required for self-preservation of all Canadians.

Will it be possible to impose conscription, without the resignation of the government, and an election on that issue?

CAN'T BE DONE

Sometimes, highly practical people
over-reach themselves.
We heard some time ago of a German propagandist, who asserted that with $2,000,000 and a couple of years
he could swing Canada to Nazism.
This would be frightening, if true.

But the fact is that money is an ineffective weapon in propaganda. A good cause is as important as a fat purse. In fact, a good cause and a slim purse are more likely to prevail, given time, than a poor cause and a fat purse. The Greeks gave a good account of themselves against the Italians, who were better equipped mechanically but not morally. That the Greeks, as this is written, have not been able to stand against the Germans, does not dissipate our argument. It is merely evidence that a poor cause can prevail, for a time, when a good cause is overwhelmed
by numbers and preparation.

False propaganda might, in this country, seem to make great progress for a time if enough money backed it up. But an awakening to the eternal verities would come in time, with the result that the fat purse would have been depleted to no purpose. (Unfortunately, in these days it takes more than a stout heart and acyde to prevail against tanks and dive bombers of an enemy long preparing.)

The purpose of this little article is to point out that those who have a good cause that needs making with the public of Canada can make that case with only a moderate expenditure. Those who have a poor cause, or who wish to promote ideas which are not in accord with the national wellbeing, might as well save their money for worthier purposes. Or, at any rate, they are invited to spend it elsewhere than with, or through,
us.—The Printed Word.

"WINGS FOR BRITAIN"

The following lines, translated from Gray's "Luna Habitable," written at Cambridge in 1737, are being published throughout Canada as a prophecy which "Wings for Britain", a volunteer Canadian fund, hopes to help come true.

"Wings for Britain" has been registered under the War Charities Act and is incorporated in Canada to serve as an agency through which all contributions of planes for the R.A.F.
may be made.

"LUNA HABITABILIS"

The time will come, when thou shalt lift thine eyes
To watch a long-drawn battle in the skies,

While aged peasants, too amazed for words,
Stare at the flying fleets of wondrous birds,

England, so long the mistress of the seas,
Where winds and waves confess her sovereignty,

Her ancient triumphs yet on high
shall bear,
And reign, the sovereign of the conquered air.

Every $22,500 contributed through
"Wings for Britain" purchases another fighter plane to help the R.A.F.
gain mastery of the air.

WORLD'S WEEK

BY HAROLD L. WEIR

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

Solution of the Iraq problem has probably become the major consideration, for the moment, in Hitler's mind.

That the revolution against the British proved abortive and unau-
successful was not only bad business for Hitler but increased his necessity for occupying that country.

It was bad business for the Nazis in two ways. First because it warned the British of Nazi intentions in that field
Harold L. Weir
and, secondly, because Hitler's failure to come promptly to the aid of the Iraqis undoubtedly weakened his prestige among the Arab peoples.

Particularly in Turkey did the Iraq disaster have serious repercussions for the Germans. Turkey had more or less resigned herself to inevitable German influence in her part of the world and apparently was prepared to offer the Nazis some slight measure of co-operation.

Now, she is not at all certain that the Germans will ever get into Iraq.
Coupling this surprise with the regret she must feel over standing aside and letting Hitler occupy her other security zone in Thrace, Turkey must be beginning to suffer an uncomfortable notion that she has backed the wrong horse.

It is not to be supposed, however,
that Germany will relax her efforts to bring Turkey within the Axis fold.
She would give a good deal to be perfectly sure that two million tough fighting men of Turkey will not suddenly turn against her.

It may be expected, therefore, that some violent new offensive will be launched somewhere very soon, if not to capture Iraq, then at least to impress the Turks.

German agents are said to be very active in Syria, while diplomatic pressure is being brought to bear upon Vichy to secure the use of Syrian bases.

The next offensive may, of course,
have nothing to do with Iraq. Urgent as the seizure of that country
may appear to Hitler, it is possible that he may set himself another task before tackling that particular problem. Iraq may be the most important objective. It may not be the next objective, however, in the chronological order he has planned.

Stalin, apparently, is persuaded that the Ukraine may soon engage Hitler's attention. That, at least, is the only interpretation that can be placed upon Stalin's sudden assumption of the premiership of Russia.
Stalin knows perfectly well that any invasion of Russian soil might easily result in a Russian counterrevolution. He made himself prime minister in order to maintain a legal control of the country even if the Communist party should suffer an eclipse.

The disappearance or defeat of the Communist party would have serious consequences for a man who derived his authority from no other source than the leadership of that party.

Spain and Portugal, too, are apprehensive of German attentions.

Portugal, of course, is traditionally a British ally. Spain owes her very existence in recent months to the British forbearance in permitting food for Spain to pass through her blockade.

Doubtless a good many Spaniards
are gratefully aware of these facts.
But the extent of fifth columnist activities in Spain and Portugal are incomprehensible to the people of countries like Canada where the full weight of Nazi propaganda is virtually unknown.

Thousands of Nazi agents have been working with feverish haste in Spain and Portugal to create an anti-British feeling and to establish the notion that the Axis cannot lose.

It would be foolish to under-estimate the effect of this pressure. It would be idiotic to believe that Spain,
for instance, will offer any serious resistance at any moment when Hitler may choose to send his armies across Spain to the attack on Gibraltar.

There is good news from Britain where the Royal Air Force has been enjoying new successes against German night raiders.

Damage and casualties have been heavy in Britain of late, but these misfortunes have been somewhat compensated by the unusually large number of German planes which have been downed.

No information, of course, has been permitted to leak out about new devices on British machines. But it seems to be certain such devices have been perfected and these increase the effectiveness of the defence.

Definite improvement, too, is noted in the efficiency of anti-aircraft batteries. The tactics of the R.A.F. have also been believed to have undergone recent change.

Britain is moving as fast as she possibly can towards a fool-proof defence against night attacks.

All this, of course, moves the possibility of a successful invasion further and further into the distance.

The Wainwright Star invites its readers to listen to Harold L. Weir in the Saturday Night Review which is broadcast every Saturday night at 8:15 over radio station CFRN (1260

It would be just as well for some of

to remember that that little certificate handed to a large portion of them in the last five years or so, entitled them to Canadian citizenship, does not give them the liberty to that his arrival on this side of the Atlantic would be met if not by fanfare, at least by passive resistance.

EDGERTON

We deeply regret to report the untimely passing of Hope, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. McCagheny. Her death occurred on Friday evening, April 9th, in an Edmonton hospital where she had been taken earlier in the week following a brief illness. The funeral took place on Sunday at 2 p.m. from the local United Church with the Rev. C. H. Morrison conducting the services. Friends and sympathizers filled the Church to overflowing; so many were unable to hear Mr. Morrison's kindly words of comfort to the bereaved family. The fact that it was 'Mother's Day' added a doubly poignant note. Besides her mother and father she is survived by two sisters and three brothers, as well as many relatives in this district and elsewhere. Interment was made in the Edgerton cemetery where a large number sorrowfully witnessed the final rites.

Pall bearers were Arthur Kelly, W. Jackson, S. McBride, H. Wynn, W. Lawson and L. Johnson.

On Monday evening of last week, the Masonic Lodge held another "Ladies' Night" following a curtailed business session. It is understood that Dr. and Mrs. Greenberg of Irma were the guests of honor. The Dr., who is a movie-camera fan, brought his projector and an assortment of films with him, and he kept the gathering interested and amused for almost two hours with his pictures—and witty remarks! A very tasty lunch served by the local Masonic members rounded out the evening.

The parishoners of St. Mary's (Ang.) Church were very pleased to welcome the recently enthroned Bishop of the Edmonton Diocese Tuesday last, when he honored the Parish with his first out-of-town official visit, for the purpose of conducting a Confirmation Service. The Rector, the Rev. A. A. Court, presented ten candidates to the Bishop and these were duly admitted to the Church in the presence of a large congregation, who listened with rapt attention to the inspired words of his Lordship. Following the very impressive service, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Kelly, which gave the congregation an opportunity of meeting the Bishop personally. Approximately forty members of the Church attended the function, and all who met him seem to agree unanimously, that the Bishop's gracious manner, and altogether pleasing personality will ensure him the united effort and support of his Clergy and people, for all time.

Mrs. Dudley Sawyer and her two daughters returned early last week from Nanaimo, B.C. as it is believed that her husband's regiment is being transferred to a camp in Eastern Canada.

Mrs. Wallace Bullymore, who has been having a truly well-earned holiday at Nanaimo, B.C.—and incidentally seeing her two sons as often as camp rules permitted—returned recently, and is already back at her job of helping all and sundry. Friday last she accompanied Mrs. Fred Guy to Edmonton, where the latter will receive medical attention for a heart condition. Mrs. Guy has been in poor health for several weeks, but it is believed that under Doctor's care considerable improvement can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Pawsey motored to Edmonton last Sunday afternoon, on business and Mrs. F. S. Pawsey accompanied them for the purpose of visiting her daughter, who is at school there, and who, we understand, is at present on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ramsay and son, also Mrs. J. Kluck, were visitors to Wainwright last Sunday.

Dr. C. Greenberg of Irma, with his wife and sister-in-law, were Sunday visitors at the F. F. Mitchell home.

We cannot help wondering—maybe hoping—that one reader at least, has missed this column during the past few weeks. Business that took us out of town, kept us away much longer than we had anticipated. It was a nice change though.

CONTINUATION OF

Town Council

The Province will be willing to do the work as we request on Main Street at the time when the provincial big machinery is brought to Wainwright for the work to be done on the extension of Highway 14 (probably July or August next).

First, after completion of the work, the provincial dept. would give no guarantee of taking over the piece of work as addition to the highway, but would continue to maintain it in good shape as is done at present by the use of the big road maintainer at each visit of the machine to the town. That the probable outside cost of the work would be approximately $1,750.00 or less; this being probably more than sufficient to cover all costs incurred, and with a great likelihood that a substantial saving below this figure could be made by the use of the big machinery, and this figure estimating cost of gravel laid down in town at $1.00 per yard which might be appreciably reduced.

On motion by Councillor Cork, this report of the Special Committee was received for further consideration and the committee discharged.

The Financial Report for the month of April was presented to council by the secretary-treasurer, and on motion by Councillor Huntingford, was received and accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of this meeting.

On motion by Councillor Lismore, the leasing of lots 4 and 5 in Block 4, Plan 6445 V, which is now vacant, was placed in the hands of the Property and Assessment Committee.

On motion by Councillor Lismore, it was unanimously resolved that the office, recently vacated by the Wainwright Gas Co., Ltd., be granted free for the purpose of assisting in the furtherance of the Victory Loan of 1941.

On motion, by Councillor Billing, it was resolved that a by-law be prepared covering all vehicles, stop signs and bicycles within the Town of Wainwright and providing a fine for any infraction of the by-law.

On motion by Councillor Lismore, the regular sitting of council was extended to 11:30 o'clock.

Councillor Huntingford then presented the following motion in keeping with his notice of motion, submitted to council at its last regular meeting, viz:

"That a certain motion, passed on January 7th, 1941, appointing Mr. Harley Renville as Town Constable and Utility man for the Town of Wainwright for the year 1941, be amended by striking out from the said motion all following the words, 'Town of Wainwright,' and by adding as substitution for such stricken words the following, viz: 'until midnight on the 30th day of June, 1941, at a salary of $100.00 per month, and thereafter as Utility man and assistant Town Constable, for the balance of the year 1941 at such salary as is set by this town council; and that, on and from July 1st, 1941, a Town Constable for the said Town of Wainwright be appointed for the balance of the said year at a salary of $100 per month, payable monthly, the duties and hours of duty be in accordance with the requirements of the Police Committee of this council."

On motion, council resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole for discussion of the above motion.

On rising, the Committee of the Whole recommended that action on this motion be deferred until the next regular meeting of council and that in the interim the motion in question remain on the table.

On motion by Councillor Cork, it was unanimously resolved that the report of the Committee of the Whole be received and accepted and that the subject matter be tabled until the next regular meeting of council.

On rising, Council was regularly adjourned.

OF THESE THREE LOVES

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

CHAPTER VIII

Jon and Gillian walked into the lounge and Jon ordered vermouth. He turned to her, smiling, and said, "Let's have it, Gillian."

"It's so hard to tell you, Jon. I can't marry you. I love—Simon Kilgrew."

He said nothing. He picked up his glass and held it out to her. "You don't despise me too much?"

He shook his head, looked into his glass. "I don't change, Gillian, where you are concerned."

"They went in to the great dining room and sat at a table by the wall."

"When do you plan to be married?"

"I think we must wait awhile. Simon wants it, I know."

"Come on, Gillian, what are you waiting for? Darling, don't you see—"

"He would, naturally. Kilgrew will make out all right. With you beside him I don't see how he could fail."

Jon drove Gillian to the station. He said, as they came in sight of the station, "I hate to think that this is the end, Gillian. It hurts so much to let you go."

They had come to the station now. He drew her to him and looked long into her eyes, as if that gazing must serve him for the rest of his days.

He kissed her then, and touched her hair. She did not speak. She could not. She hurried into the station, almost stumbling, bumping into Simon and Deborah before she knew them.

It's—It's done, she said. "It was hard."

Simon pressed her hand.

"It's time for the train, Gillian."

Deborah walked on ahead.

Simon's kiss was one of love and possession and promise. She said, "It's all right with Jon if I go to work with you, Simon. He thought it was rather a good idea. I'm going to talk to Anne about it. I'll see you very soon."

She followed Deborah into the train.

Under the bright stars they walked up the lane from the bus. In the dark mass of Rydal House only one light burned. Anne's green shaded lamp in the library. They walked quietly in on him. Deborah saluted briskly. "I have to report, Brigadier, that the battle is won and the whole campaign is a howling success. The enemy capitulated this afternoon. Anyway Anne, she's told Jon Hilgrew it's all off and advised Simon it's all on."

"My dear Gillian. I feel this is the greatest victory ever won. I'll have a whiskey and soda to celebrate."

"That's good, because you need to be prepared for a shock; I'm going to work—I'm going to take a job in the publishing house with Simon Kilgrew."

"We've done it! It's the book of the month, Gillian—Westward the Tide. They're wild about it. I have to go to New York at once. I'll fly. You'll come with me. We'll be married there or here or anywhere. Come on, Gillian, what are you waiting for? Darling, don't you see—"

"Simon!" She saw him through a mist of tears. "Wait, Simon. I can't. I mean we'd better wait until you come back. There'll be so many things for you to do in New York. I want a honeymoon, not a business trip."

"Perhaps you're right, Gillian. I can spend things up down there. I can be back tomorrow and—and you will be waiting here for me and—oh it's hard to realize—"

"I'm still waiting, Simon. But you had better get going, my dear. You have only a little time."

"Dash it! And I must leave poor Jaffrey's stuff till I get back. I tell you, you dig into it and look it over and wire me if there's anything there, anything big."

"You're my partner, aren't you?" He tilted her chin and kissed her gravely on the tip of the nose. "Of course I do."

She rode to the air port with Simon.

"I'm so proud, Simon," she said, her eyes never leaving his face. "Proud and happy to think you've done it."

"We've done it, you mean. It was your being there always by my side that pushed me along. I couldn't have brought it off without you. It means our happiness. When I come back—"

"I'll be waiting, Simon."

It was late afternoon when Gillian returned to the office.

With something in her heart that was more than a prayer, she went up to Simon's room.

"There's nothing—nothing of what I feared," she assured herself eagerly as the box swiftly emptied. "I might have known he would not."

hope they all do. I hope we may send ten thousand after them and ten thousand after them!"

"Publisher's dream," grinned Simon. "Just the same, I feel we are going to do well. What we want is a book—a big book—and I have an idea that we'll find it among the writings Jaffrey left behind him."

One day the wooden box came from Jaffrey Clay's aunt, Gillian and Simon were downstairs in the reception room. "It's come at last. Think of it, Gill, that box may be worth its weight in gold, yes, many times over."

Simon was telling the men to take it upstairs and put it in his office. A messenger boy came in and handed him a telegram. He glanced at it and turned to Gillian with a bright wonder and triumph in his eyes. "We've done it! It's the book of the month, Gillian—Westward the Tide. They're wild about it. I have to go to New York at once. I'll fly. You'll come with me. We'll be married there or here or anywhere. Come on, Gillian, what are you waiting for? Darling, don't you see—"

"Simon!" She saw him through a mist of tears. "Wait, Simon. I can't. I mean we'd better wait until you come back. There'll be so many things for you to do in New York. I want a honeymoon, not a business trip."

"Perhaps you're right, Gillian. I can spend things up down there. I can be back tomorrow and—and you will be waiting here for me and—oh it's hard to realize—"

"Dash it! And I must leave poor Jaffrey's stuff till I get back. I tell you, you dig into it and look it over and wire me if there's anything there, anything big."

"You're my partner, aren't you?" He tilted her chin and kissed her gravely on the tip of the nose. "Of course I do."

She rode to the air port with Simon.

"I'm so proud, Simon," she said, her eyes never leaving his face. "Proud and happy to think you've done it."

"We've done it, you mean. It was your being there always by my side that pushed me along. I couldn't have brought it off without you. It means our happiness. When I come back—"

"I'll be waiting, Simon."

It was late afternoon when Gillian returned to the office.

With something in her heart that was more than a prayer, she went up to Simon's room.

"There's nothing—nothing of what I feared," she assured herself eagerly as the box swiftly emptied. "I might have known he would not."

Oh!

It was the last thing in the box. A large manila envelope, sealed and labeled in bold writing—"Journal of my Loves," and dated a few weeks before the date of his death.

Gillian stared at it, put out her hand, drew that hand back.

"I can't," she whispered. "I can't—and yet I must." She picked up the envelope and tore it open. She carried it to Simon's desk, drew out the manuscript and laid it on the blotting pad.

Without stopping, she read on and on.

Slowly in that room she began to vision the swift destruction of something that had been noble and good, something godlike and splendid. Almost she could see Simon Kilgrew's face as the pain, the disintegration, the horror, and she knew that he would never completely recover from these things. Something would go out of life forever, after reading these pages.

"He shan't read them," she said. "Not to me, to me, to me. He shan't see them. I am the only one now who knows they ever existed. Simon will never know!"

She moved quickly now, in a panic. She could not bear to look for a moment longer at that and damning record that Jaffrey Clay had left. She took it out of sight, hid it, destroyed it and forever pretend that it had never been.

But she was afraid. Perhaps the book would be a tremendous success, perhaps it would be a sensation—in fact, she was pretty sure it would be.

She hurriedly put out the lights and left the building.

She was sitting with the half-empty tea cup when Anne came in with a load of books.

"Here," she said, "is something. . . Why, what is it, Simon? You look like death. What kept you so late?"

She moved her shoulders, as if shaking off some oppressive weight, then stood up and walked to the window and gazed out on the lights of the city.

She said, "I'm sorry to bother you, Anne. Don't think I'm unappreciative. I'm not. Certainly not on my own account. This is just—something. It will pass. When Simon comes back we are going to be married. I am going to call Deb tomorrow and tell her to come and help me buy my trousseau. This time I'm going to buy it."

She turned from the window. "They say the third time does it—eh, Anne?" She laughed softly. "I had three lovers—Jaff, Jon and Simon. Sounds like a riddle, doesn't it? Jaff is dead, Jon is done with—there's only Simon. It is a riddle. Anne—it's a peach of a riddle." She said good night then and kissed him and went to bed.

At the Printery there was a telegram from Simon. The success of his negotiations with the book-club officials had more than come up to his expectations. He would be back in Montreal at five that afternoon. Would she meet him at the airport? And there was love for her.

Gillian could find little happiness in the day. She had no often to pass that locked cupboard where, deep hidden beneath the reams of musty paper, there lay that story that Jaffrey Clay had left. In the joy of seeing Simon, tall and smiling, his eyes searching the crowd for her, she forgot her troubles. He held her close to him, she clung to him and said, "Oh, Simon, it's been so long!"

"Darling! I was hoping you'd say that. It was an age for me too. And you did miss me."

Simon had no chance to continue until they were seated in the taxi. "I thought there'd be a wife from you, Gillian. Did you go through Jaffrey's manuscripts?"

"Yes—yes, Simon. I—I'm afraid there is nothing very wonderful there. I told you not to build so much on the hope that there would be a masterpiece, because I—"

Simon was frowning, his lower lip caught in his teeth. This had been a blow to him. "I—I can't understand it," he said at last. "I had hoped so much—"

"I know, Simon. I'm sorry. But—there are other things. There will be other books, greater ones. And you have enough of Jaff's material anyway for a couple of volumes. They should do well."

"Yes—well, we'll have to be content with that. You're all that matters to me, Gillian. Oh, I forgot." He fished in his waistcoat pocket. "The most important thing—and I almost forgot it."

He brought out a cream-colored box and opened and held it before her eyes.

"An emerald!" She gazed at it, enraptured—"I love it, Simon—love it!"

"I'll put it on your finger now and kiss you and think you're another step nearer to belonging to me."

She drew back. "I—wait until tomorrow, Simon. Do you mind waiting until then? It's—it's just that today I don't feel it, Gillian! I—I know I could not get this before, but you also know I'd set my heart on it. I want you to wear it. Still, you must have your reasons. I'll submit. But I'll have the kiss."

"As many as you want, Simon. I love you."

How Britain's Shopkeepers Make

The Blitz

In spite of bombs and the blackout, shop-window display in Britain has not only continued but actually increased in ingenuity and service. One of the country's leading electrical firms promptly discovered a substitute for plywood—the pre-war-time foundation of window display—in linen stretched taut on wooden frames.

Display settings in linen. It was found, could be folded into small compass. Where, in former days, a van could only carry three or four sets, now it can transport ten times as many.

Alaska Cruise Delightful Holiday

The Trail of '98 that once taxed the energies of Alaska-bound prospectors, today has an alternative and more attractive route, served not by dog-sled, but by luxury steamships of the Canadian Pacific coast fleet, and following the sheltered "Inside Passage" between Vancouver and Skagway. These trim liners, whose stater ships ply the "Triangle Route" between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, and cruise the west coast of Vancouver Island, bring the "Midnight Sun" within three days of Vancouver. Commencing May 2 and effective till Sept. 30, three smart "Princess" liners will conduct a series of 14-day cruises from Vancouver to Skagway, with a 23-hour stop-over at the Alaska port. The B.C. coast service will also operate three 11-day cruises to Alaska, following the route by rail and lake from Skagway to Lake Bennett, Whitehorse and West Taku Arm. The cruise liner "Princess Charlotte" will feature in these tours. From comfy deck chairs, today's northbound tourist is treated to a moving pageant of majestic glaciers, towering peaks, and rock-bound fjords. Adventure waits at every port of call. Alert Bay, Prince Rupert, Ketchikan, Wrangell and Juneau follow in colorful succession, each with its weird array of totem poles and other symbols of Indian life. Picturesque "Sunset Cruises," along the west coast of Vancouver Island are also scheduled for the current season between Victoria and Port Alice. These popular cruises offer the passenger eight days of splendid coastal scenery with regular stop-overs at quaint Indian fishing villages. Two Canadian Pacific liners will be in "Sunset Cruise" service from June 1 to September 21. Life on a Canadian Pacific coast vessel is fashioned after that of an ocean liner. Deck tennis, shuffleboard, morning bouillon, afternoon tea, horse racing, dances, moonlight promenades on deck, and midnight snacks all contribute to the joys of shipboard life on a Canadian Pacific "Princess" liner.

NO DESERT PROBLEM

How often, as meal time draws near, do you wonder rather desperately what you are going to serve for dessert? Here is a dessert which will save a lot of worry and work when that question comes up again and the results will delight your family. Quick cooking tapioca cream combined with chocolate contains so many food essentials that it suggests planning the meal backwards—merely supplementing the dessert with a few simple dishes and a beverage. It has eggs and milk, chocolate and energy-giving tapioca—all of which go a long way towards meeting the family's daily food needs. When all these good things are offered in a fluffy, creamy dessert, they banish all thought of duty and are eagerly eaten.

Chocolate Tapioca Cream
4 tablespoons quick-cooking

tapioca

1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
1 egg yolk
4 cups milk
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt, chocolate, egg yolk. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes,) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white; add to remaining tapioca mixture and blend. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. Add vanilla and chill. Serve in sherbet glasses. Serve with this Marshmallow Mint Sauce or garnish with whipped cream. Serves 8.

Marshmallow Mint Sauce

1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
8 marshmallows, cut in small pieces
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
1/2 teaspoon peppermint extract

Green Coloring
Bring sugar and water to a boil and boil to a thin syrup (230 degrees F.). Syrup will not be thick enough to spin a thread. Remove from fire; add marshmallows and let stand until marshmallows are melted, pressing them under syrup. Pour syrup slowly over egg white, beating until mixture is cool. Add peppermint extract and enough coloring to make sauce a delicate green. Makes 1 cup.

A TIP FOR TEA TIME

There are few of our customs more delightful and more worth preserving than 4 o'clock tea and it is becoming one of the daily "musts" in homes and offices on this side of the water. It also refreshes one and adds zest to the closing hours of the day. Plan to serve something a little different at tea time at home. Nothing that would involve extra work of course because that would defeat the purpose of the tea hour—a time for relaxation and congeniality. These suggestions for small cakes are ideal. They provide just enough in the way of food and are perfect companions for a fragrant cup of tea.

1893, just 3 years later than the Ontario public health laboratory, established in 1890.)

Last year 140,000 persons were x-rayed for tuberculosis and hundreds of new cases were discovered. The Department helped to diagnose, treat and prevent such diseases as syphilis, gonorrhea, tuberculosis, pneumonia, typhoid and diphtheria and private practitioners make ample use, (just as they do here) of the Department's laboratory service in the diagnosis of rare diseases.

The Department is now analyzing 25,000 records of heart cases keeping close tabs on the youngsters with rheumatic heart disease, the number one killer of school children. "The next big problem," says Charles Bolduan, M.D., director of Health Education is the control of diabetes. Over 75,000 New Yorkers are diabetics.

"Lighthouse" Lanterns

For Australia's Great New Bridge. Lanterns somewhat similar to those used for lighthouses are a feature of Australia's second largest span bridge, the new Story Bridge in Brisbane.

It has 149 Golden Ray lanterns equipped with 140 watt sodium discharge lamps, the largest sodium lighting installation in Australia. The lanterns, originated by a British firm, are used on English roads. They embody a system of light control by scientifically designed prisms which distribute light evenly along the roadway exactly where it is required. The lamps give eight times the light of ordinary 100 watt lamps used for domestic purposes.

The first road lighting scheme to come within Great Britain's Trunk Roads Act of 1936 was equipped with these lanterns which have been used since then in Singapore, India, Australia and New Zealand. The British makers exported more in 1940 than in 1939 and the prospects for the present year are even better.

BREEDING SUNFLOWERS FOR OIL

(Experimental Farms News)
At the present time only a small quantity of sunflower seed is produced annually in Canada. There has been no great demand for large quantities of this seed on the Canadian markets. The relatively small quantity which is annually produced in this country is sold mainly to seed houses or used in poultry feeds, says F. E. Nowoad, Division of Forage Plants, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

A number of varieties of sunflowers have been thoroughly tested at most of the Dominion Experimental Farms in Canada where it has been found that good seed can be produced from some of the earlier maturing varieties. The seed yields have not been very high but it has been disclosed that great variations occur in the percentage of oil that can be extracted from the seed.

The amount of seed and percentage of oil in the seed was found to be influenced to some extent by most of the factors which effect plant growth. However, great variations exist in the quantity and quality of the oil in different strains out of a particular variety.

Considerable progress has been made during the past few years at the Division of Forage Plants, Ottawa, and at the Dominion Forage Crop Laboratory at Saskatoon, in selecting and breeding for high oil content in the seed. In a number of lines selected out of the Monmonite variety the percentage of oil in 1936 varied from 21.5 to 33.3. In 1939, the variation in the oil content in another crop was from 16.5 to 34.6 per cent while at the same time the average percentage of oil in the parent variety was 28.0.

A two-year average yield of seed at the Monmonite variety was 617 pounds at the three stations in western Canada, and 1210 pounds per acre at four stations in eastern Canada. The yield of seed of the high-oil strains at Ottawa ranged from as low as 605 pounds to as high as 2760 pounds of seed per acre.

This information is based upon results obtained from small experimental plots, but progress is now being made by plant breeding further to increase the oil content and at the same time maintain the high seed yields mentioned.

It is understood that seed growers are not likely to be interested in sunflowers as an oil-bearing crop unless these two factors are combined and maintained under field conditions and on a larger scale.

Several loads of cinders have been placed on the bad spot on Queen street—but yet it is almost a disgrace to attempt to drive that street in a car!

Quite a nice appearance has been given to the local telephone exchange premises by the placing of a wide cement sidewalk in front of the premises.

Congratulations to Miss Leona Elaine Boyd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Boyd, in passing her recent nursing exams.
